In board Water pumps.

Having let my Aquaroll run dry recently the inboard Shurflo pump refused to pump water to the various taps despite having refilled the Aquaroll. What was immediately noticeable was the pumps change of note from its normal pulsing to a quiet swishing sound. Realising that the pump was totally air locked and somewhat warm to touch the quickest solution to restore correct operation was to open the small yellow lever drain down tap adjacent to the pump. A massive splutter and explosion of air was discharged to the underside of the van (sorry to any passing people of a nervous disposition) but it did the trick and we were once again back in action with water at all the taps and shower.
